SBT NEWS

Main News Of Today:

-Magnitude 3.7 earthquake rattles Ontario-Quebec border

This Thursday February 1st An earthquake was felt early Thursday morning in the Salaberry-de-Valleyfield region, in southwestern Quebec.

Earthquakes Canada specifies that the earthquake, the intensity of which was measured at a magnitude of 3.7, occurred at 7:37 a.m. 12 kilometers southeast of Salaberry-de-Valleyfield and approximately 50 kilometers southwest of Montreal. .

The federal agency reported no damage associated with this earthquake an hour later.

Seismologists use a magnitude scale to measure an earthquake. They point out that an earthquake of the magnitude of Thursday morning's is often felt, but rarely causes damage.

It was the second earthquake reported in Quebec by Earthquakes Canada since the start of the year. On January 4, a 3.0 earthquake occurred in the La Malbaie region, in Charlevoix.

Earthquakes Canada reports that the seismic zone of Western Quebec constitutes a vast territory including the Ottawa Valley from Montreal to Témiscamingue, as well as the regions of the Laurentians and Eastern Ontario.

On February 1, a power outage plunged a small part of the city of Toronto into darkness. In total, more than 7,000 residents were without power around 9 p.m.

But that's not all ! This incident impacted traffic lights and transport services, causing numerous traffic problems.

Faced with this situation, firefighters were dispatched to the scene to rescue people stuck in elevators.

The power outage was caused by a wild animal

As CBA reports, this general outage was caused by a raccoon. Indeed, the somewhat prankster animal would have managed to sneak into the electrical distribution system of the Toronto Hydro company.

The least we can say is that the mammal with its salt-and-pepper coat sowed discord for several hours. For the moment, authorities do not know how the animal was able to sneak inside.
